Pressure Ulcers

Monitoring, Reporting & Improvement

Monday 1st July 2019 De Vere W1 Conference Centre London

“Pressure ulcers are a key indicator of the quality and experience of patient care. Despite progress since 2012 in the management of pressure ulcers they remain a significant healthcare problem, with over 1,300 new ulcers reported each month with up to 200,000 people developing a new pressure ulcer in 2017/18. Treating pressure ulcers costs the NHS more than £1.4 million every day (Guest et al 2017). We know that many pressure ulcers are preventable, so when they do occur they can have a profound impact on the overall wellbeing of patients and can be both painful and debilitating. Preventing them will improve care for all vulnerable patients.” NHS Improvement November 2018

This conference focuses on Pressure Ulcers: monitoring, reporting and improvement in line with the 2018 NHS Improvement recommendations and guidance.

“The occurrence of pressure ulcers is a measure of the quality of care. However, if they are to be identified and reported in an consistent way, it is imperative that there are clear definitions of what needs to be measured and how measurement needs to be done. For a long time, clinicians have been aware of, and tried to quantify, the discrepancies to provide a baseline for improvement, but to date they have been unsuccessful. It is hoped that this system-wide approach led by NHSI will have the necessary influence on clinical practice, so it can help clinicians deliver high-quality pressure ulcer care, alongside standardised educational and quality improvement approaches..” Jacqui Fletcher & Jennie Hall NHS Improvement, Nursing Times 2018

“A plan and a communications strategy have been developed to support implementation of the recommendations in practice and, it is hoped, start standardising how pressure ulcers are defined, measured and reported. National roll-out is planned to start in April 2019” Jacqui Fletcher is senior clinical nurse advisor; Jennie Hall is programme director/strategic nurse adviser; both at Stop the Pressure, NHS Improvement, Nursing Times 2018

“We anticipate that full implementation will improve understanding of the level of pressure damage harm”
Ruth May Executive Director of Nursing, June 2018

This conference will enable you to:

- Network with colleagues who are working to improve the measurement, reporting and reduction of pressure ulcers and harm from pressure ulcers
- Understand the implications of the 2018 guidance in terms of local monitoring, reporting and improvement
- Learn from outstanding practice in pressure ulcer reporting
- Reflect on national developments to improve standardization and consistency
- Look forward to the National Pressure Ulcer Audit Tool
- Improve the way you view pressure ulcers – eliminating the focus on avoidability
- Understand the implications of the 2018 recommendations in end of life care, medical device related pressure ulcers and pressure ulcers on admission
- Understand how you can reduce pressure ulcers and harm from pressure ulcers
- Learn from case studies of reduction, management and reporting of pressure ulcers in critical care, end of life care, care homes, cancer care and pressure ulcers related to medical devices
- Ensure you are up to date with the latest evidence and definitions
- Self assess and reflect on your own practice
- Gain CPD accreditation points contributing to professional development and revalidation evidence
