

Name and titles: Marsha Jones

Your current role/position: Deputy Chief Nurse

Your organisation: Epsom and St Helier's University Hospital NHS Trust

Social media links:

Twitter: @MarshaLTJones

LinkedIn: Marsha Jones <http://linkedin.com/in/marsha-jones-ba496623>

Instagram: joneako2010

Organisation website: <https://www.epsom-sthelier.nhs.uk>

Marsha Jones is a trained Secondary school science teacher, registered nurse and a practising midwife with nearly 20 years experience in the NHS and currently works as a Deputy Chief Nurse. Marsha has experiences of working in acute, maternity, community health settings and Commissioning. Marsha is a Mary Seacole Scholar (Leadership) and a Darzi Fellow. Marsha is a change management practitioner and a Nye Bevan Graduate. In Marsha's previous roles, she has done service improvement projects in Maternity settings as well as Admission avoidance and System Resilience work streams. Marsha has supported her previous Organisation as the Chair of the BAME staff network and the most Senior BAME Nurse in Organisation by working collaboratively with the Executive team in bringing about tangible change and access to resources such as successful Charity bid of £50k for BAME staff.

Marsha's interests are public health, patient safety, quality improvement, leadership, management, coaching and mentoring, patient experience and staff experience with an interest in BME staff and service users' experiences.

I am proud and excited to be a CNO Clinical Fellow with a focus on clinical excellence in End of Life Care as well as developing a pathway for Nurses that want to pursue a career in End of Life and Palliative Care. There is dignity in death and dying. Most importantly you only die once, it is an ideal opportunity in ensuring this is core to patient care.

NHS England and NHS Improvement

