This important national conference provides an essential update for current and aspiring nurse prescribers on prescribing at the end of life. It is widely recognized that pain and symptom control at the end of life is not always optimal, the development of nurse prescribing has a key role in improving pain and symptom control for patients at the end of life. The conference, which includes national updates, extended in depth sessions and case studies will focus on developing your skills and competence as a nurse prescriber in end of life care.

“The way we care for dying people is a litmus test for the kind of society we are and for our health and care services. That’s why it’s essential that people have around the clock access to pain relief and symptom control.” Simon Chapman, Director of Public and Parliamentary Engagement at Dying Matters and the National Council for Palliative Care

“There are unacceptable variations in aspects of palliative and end of life care such as access to pain control, related to different care settings” Ambitions for Palliative and End of Life Care: A national framework for local action 2015-2020

“People have watched their loved ones dying in pain or in an agitated state because their symptoms have been ineffectively or poorly managed... These cases show how pain, agitation and other distressing symptoms were not adequately controlled as people neared the end of their lives. This caused additional unnecessary suffering for the person who was dying, and also for their loved ones, who were by their bedside in their final days and hours. In many cases, this distress could have been avoided.” The Parliamentary and Health Service The Health Service Ombudsman

“NMP in a palliative care context may be one mechanism through which people can be supported to remain at home with well controlled symptoms at the end of life. For example, patients with cancer typically spend 65-80% of their last 6 months of life at home and adequate pain control is often hindered by poor access to effective timely analgesia. These patients often have multiple, rapidly changing symptoms requiring highly specialist management” Non-Medical Prescribing in Palliative Care: A Regional Survey, Dr Lucy Ziegler University of Leeds
