The role of the Caldicott Guardian is currently evolving to meet the challenge of implementing “Information to Share or not to share” The Information Governance review (“Caldicott 2” published 2013) across the Health and Social Care System. There is also a need to deliver the recommendations of the recent Review of Data Security, consent and opt outs (Published July 2016). Further guidance is expected to be published later in the year about the role of Caldicott Guardians.

This one day training course about Caldicott Guardian Principles has been developed to provide both practical and appropriate training for experienced Caldicott Guardians, their deputies and others involved in delivering the Caldicott Guardian Function in a wide range of Organisations.

The day will provide sound foundations for those seeking to understand the Caldicott Guardian Role, and inspiration as to how it can be developed in their own organisations based on the latest National Guidance. The course is fully interactive; and participants in small groups will face a number of case study challenges throughout the day building personal knowledge, understanding and confidence.

The course is facilitated by Christopher Fincken, who has been delivering Caldicott training for sixteen years. He is the former Chairman of the UK Caldicott Guardian Council (2012-2017), and a Caldicott Guardian for a national charity. He was an independent member of the National Information Governance Committee advising the Care Quality Commission. He was one of the first non-clinicians to be a Caldicott Guardian of an Acute Hospital, a post he held for eleven years. He has deep experience of the challenges that real life presents and a passion to understand and unravel problems, to try and find the best solution. With a particular concern about the importance of sharing information in relation to Domestic and other violence, he has worked extensively in the field of Multi Agency Risk Assessment Conferences (MARAC- Domestic Violence) and is the author of the published guidance document for Caldicott Guardians.
