“We collect PROMs as they are a unique source of insight for both provider trusts and CCGs in that they shine a light on variation in the outcomes of surgery, as reported by patients themselves....You can use PROMs data to investigate outcomes reported by patients at individual trusts and compare these outcomes across several trusts. This data can also be used to identify variation in outcomes between a trust and the national average...Analysing this data allows provider trusts to investigate whether there are any patterns in their patients’ outcomes.” NHS England October 2016

This national conference will open with national developments in Patient Reported Outcome Measures (PROMs) and will then focus on PROMs in clinical practice; using case studies of PROMs changing clinical practice alongside expert sessions on subjects such as using PROMs for decision making, to change practice, and auditing and analysis of outlines. There will also be national updates on the future of PROMs, a masterclass aimed at beginners to PROMs, an extended interactive session focusing on ePROMs, and another focusing on patient engagement and involvement in PROMs development.

09.00 Pre Conference: ePROMs Supplier Showcase

This interactive session will provide an overview of ePROMs products and implementation in practice. The session will cover diverse areas of consideration to all stakeholders interested in accurately and effectively capturing PROMs electronically. The session will also examine the pros and cons of ePROMs compared to paper based PROMs, how to migrate from paper based PROMs to ePROMs, models of administration, patient engagement and issues with regard to the sharing of data.
